

Word of the Week for February 8, 2009

This week Shelly and I will be heading to Cancun for a quick getaway to celebrate our ten year wedding anniversary. I am so excited to be able to take a short “timeout” to the everyday life we lead. It will be very relaxing sitting in the sand and hearing the waves roll in.

The “timeout” thought reminded me of the question, “How often do we take a “timeout” in our relationship with the Father? I believe when we miss our time with the Father, we have truly missed out on an important time in our day.

Today we begin a new series . . . “No Perfect Families Allowed.” During the month of February we will be looking at dysfunctional families in the Bible and see how God still used them in spite of their flaws. The good news is that if God can use them, surely He can use us!!

Have a great week!
