

Word of the Week for March 22, 2009

We start out this week and journey toward Easter with a sermon series entitled, “The Shadows of the Cross.” This is my favorite time of the year. It is so appropriate that Easter falls in the spring time. With spring comes new life in nature. I love to see the blooms on trees, flowers, and the grass turning green . . . as if death is overtaken with life.

On the first Easter morning that is exactly what happened. When Christ came out of the tomb, death was conquered and life came forth. How amazing it is to stop and think about how one morning changed my life. I hope you will take the time to reflect on how Christ’s resurrection has changed you. Thank God for his sacrifice but ultimately his power in the resurrection!

Living Life!
